Our History

Wisconsin Farm Bureau Federation was organized by a group of farmers in Waukesha on May 27, 1920, and incorporated in December of 1920. The farmers wanted to have an organization controlled by farmers to represent them on legislative issues and to provide farm marketing, business and planning consulting and services. Since then, WFBF has evolved into one of the most effective voices for farmers in Wisconsin.

WFBF is a voluntary, non-governmental organization financed and controlled by the voting member families (those directly involved in agriculture). The voting members elect delegates who in turn elect a state board of directors of 11 people. One district director from each of the nine districts, together with the Promotion and Education Chair and the Young Farmer and Agriculturist Chair, make up the WFBF Board of Directors.

There are 61 county Farm Bureaus in Wisconsin affiliated with WFBF, which is a member of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Rural Route is the official publication of the Wisconsin Farm Bureau. Published six times a year, it contains summaries of issues facing Wisconsin agriculture, commentary on Farm Bureau's involvement and news about Farm Bureau events.
