

That old glory

By a Special Correspondent

THE ground of Hampstead Hockey Club was thick with Blues—Oxford and Cambridge—internationals, past and present, and the sweet scent of old glory as the members mustered yesterday to honour the 75th anniversary of this flourishing club.

The President, P. C. Kay, rallied his Old Members to put the young men of the 2nd XI in their place by a goal to nil. Truth to tell, the Old Members were not all that old, notably Mallinson, who scored their goal, Cardoza and Bartlett and Livingstone, who must have been just about the babies of the side and very healthy at that.

There was an older vintage, ably represented by Milsted, who was in his prime before most of his opponents had seen the light. He will surely remember what I fancy must be positively his last appearance and he will remember it most in the morning.

A little later the Present were in a fair way to outdo the Past when Hampstead 1st XI led the team sent to try them by the Hockey Association by 2 goals to nil.

For this game the club reverted to an orthodox five-forward formation. It suited them a good deal better, I thought, than the four-forward game they played a week before.

The right side triangle of Clarke, Lunn and Randall worked the standard flanking moves with some success. Spicer popped the first shot in from a penalty corner, Randall the second and, with a bit of luck there might have been a third goal by Hampstead in the second half.

But at the critical point, Clarke, an old campaigner, rallied the Hockey Association XI by his personal example and, after suffering a penalty for off-side, scored their first goal.

Lynn, though slower than of old, still has the same sure touch, controlling the ball well on a somewhat fiery surface, and it was he who scored the parting goal, so that all retired content.
