

Trampstead find the Chestnuts Just too Hot

THE exigencies of the moment have caused many clubs to adopt names which give no hint of the identity they conceal, but no one could be in doubt about the origin of Trampstead who, last Saturday, were narrowly defeated, 2 goals to 1, by Teddington, playing as Chestnuts. The Tramps, a Sunday club, and Hampstead have long been closely associated.

With the exception of R. L. Milsted and B. W. Fickling none of the Hampstead first eleven regulars was playing, but two well-known Tramps were present, J. E. Gregory and J. E. McSwiney. It was a typical Gregory shot that gave Trampstead the lead in the first half, but the Chestnuts' steady pressure brought them an equalising goal just before the interval and another in the second half, despite the admirable defence sustained by Trampstead's half-backs, J. W. Day, R. L. Milsted, P. C. James. Both these goals were scored by the Chestnuts' centre-forward, A. Buckner.

'Varsity Match without Blues

Arrangements are being made for a match between Oxford and Cambridge Universities to be played in February (probably the 24th) at either Oxford or Cambridge. No Blues will be awarded. Both Universities have lost players who would still have been up but for the war. E. D. R. Eagar, who should have captained Oxford, is serving with the South Wales Borderers, and J. D. Wakeling, of Cambridge, has likewise vanished from the scene. G. B. Kenyon is acting captain in Wakeling's place, with R. H. Gower as assistant secretary. These two are the only Old Blues in residence.

MARKED MAN: A. Buckner, the Chestnuts' centre-forward, finds opponents closing in on him from all sides. On the left is J. E. McSwiney, who used to keep goal for Bromley, and behind him, R. L. Milsted, Hampstead's captain for many years. In the centre and nearest the camera is J. E. Gregory, the former West and England centre-forward.

WHERE DID THAT ONE GO? Trampstead's defenders, fearing the worst, turn to follow a shot from E. Wye (Chestnuts), which has beaten them. Luck was with Trampstead, for the shot shaved the post upon the outside.

SUCCESSFUL SWERVE: A. Buckner (left), who scored both the Chestnuts' goals, eludes an opponent and keeps the ball nicely under control.

CHESTNUTS: A. King, J. Gubbins, A. Buckner, E. Wye, A. Goddard, C. F. Ballard, E. Krarup, Umpire Hollidge, J. Parsons, G. Hamilton, H. J. Still, M. A. Whyman.
